CORRESPONDENT

The week from Aug. 8 to Aug. 12, 2022, has been designated as the Employer Support of the Guard and Reserve Week, to honor ESGR and the employers who support U.S. servicemen and women by providing them secure and readily available civilian jobs.

Gov. Ralph DL Torres signed Monday at his office the proclamation that makes the designation, saying, "The members of the Guard and Reserves contribute to the safety and security of our entire nation and their civilian employers are also on the frontlines of our security as they support them. The Commonwealth and the entire nation would not be the same without the ESGR and their many contributions to our community."

Monday's occasion was attended by volunteers and members of the ESGR on Saipan, Rose Igitol, Joshlyn Blas, CNMI Area committee chair Rita A. Sablan, and ESGR Ombudsman for the CNMI Joann Aquino, along with retired members of the U.S. Army, Col. Harry Blanco and Capt. Danny Aquino, and U.S. servicemen employers Patrick Cabrera and Cathy Attao-Toves, who also attended the Legislature's annual recognition ceremony for ESGR that same day at the Legislature's chamber.

The proclamation recognizes all employers who provide U.S. servicemen and women with jobs that these individuals can return to after completing their service.

Blanco said the most important thing is for the community to understand the Uniformed Services Employment and Reemployment Rights Act, or USERRA law, which lists the rights of U.S. servicemen. Part of that law guarantees that members of the Guard and Reserve get to keep their civilian jobs even when on active deployment. That allows them to focus on their mission, knowing full well that there is still a job waiting when they return home.

"The most important thing is making employers and service members understand the law that provides the support of service members to get special military leave from the government and the private sector," Blanco said.

Sablan said the ESGR has been around for 25 years in the CNMI "and we want to continually honor our employers that support the Guard and Reserves. ... And we look forward to continually collaborate with them so that our Guards and Reserves are protected. ... Not only do they serve our community, but they do also serve our nation...for any kind of emergency. ... So we want to thank everyone for your support and continued assistance to ESGR."

Torres also mentioned at the proclamation signing that the process of having a National Guard in the CNMI was nearing completion, making note that the CNMI will mostly likely have an Air National Guard, which would be more logical because of the military divert airport that is being built on Tinian.

This year, the ESGR celebrates 25 years of service in the CNMI and, as an agency of the Department of Defense, has been helping U.S. servicemen for 50 years.

Torres also celebrated his birthday on the day of the proclamation signing.

Hotel occupancy at 34% in July—HANMI

The Hotel Association of the Northern Mariana Islands reported 34% average occupancy rate among its 12 member-hotels for July 2022, compared to 16% average occupancy in July 2021.

A total of 15,232 of 45,259 available room nights sold during July 2022, compared to 6,042 of 36,753 available rooms sold in July 2021. Average room rates were $158.33 compared to $148.69 last July.

“We saw a small spike in June thanks to the Pacific Mini Games, and in July direct flights from South

Korea continued to be the foundation of most visitor arrivals,” said HANMI chair Ivan Quichocho. “We look forward to slightly higher occupancy rates and more revenue generation beginning in September with the commencement of direct flights three times a week between Tokyo and Saipan by United Airlines. However, this is still much work ahead to rebuild the Japan market, especially with the devaluation of the yen against the dollar and the fact that since we have had only a few direct flights from Japan in the last four years, we need to reintroduce the Marianas to the public.”

Hotels included in HANMI’s monthly statistical report are Aqua Resort Club, Aquarius Beach Tower, Century Hotel, GrandVrio Resort

Saipan, Crowne Plaza Resort Saipan, Hyatt Regency Saipan, Kanoa Resort Saipan, Kensington Hotel Saipan, LaoLao Bay Golf & Resort, Saipan World Resort, Surfrider Resort Hotel, and Pacific Islands Club Saipan. The occupancy rates do not include venue rentals at Kanoa Resort Saipan for government COVID-19 quarantine accommodations.

HANMI was established in 1985 as a professional forum for the hospitality industry of the Marianas. HANMI also makes regular charitable donations to support non-profit organizations and tourism-related government projects. (HANMI)

FRANCES

After the departure of former school president and current Northern Marianas College president Dr. Galvin Deleon Guerrero, Taimanao stepped in as acting president throughout the school year 2021-2022. Despite the challenges presented during the community’s exposure to the COVID-19 virus, Taimanao successfully led the institution toward a strong end of the school year.

The school community members had access to regular on-site COVID-19 testing, hybrid learning options, the reinstatement of student events, and led the completion of the school’s 2021-2026 strategic plan and updated and revision of the school’s curriculum.

Taimanao brings 23 years of teaching experience and 10 years of administrative experience. Prior to MCS, Taimanao served as an elementary teacher at San Vicente Elementary School and retired as a vice principal at the CNMI Public School System. In August 2006, Taimanao transitioned to Mount Carmel School and has taught elementary, middle school, and high school grade levels. Since then, she has remained instrumental in various academic programs, which only solidified the board of directors’ decision to select her for the post.

“It’s been an honor to work with Frances, and after reflecting on last school year, it’s time to take Mount Carmel School to the next stage and we as a board of directors felt that [she] was right for the job,” said Babauta. “Mrs. Taimanao will lead the school for the next few years and it is quite exciting also as we announce that we are celebrating Mount Carmel School’s 70th anniversary.”

“It is an honor to serve as Mount Carmel School’s president,” said Taimanao. “I’ve served this institution for 16 years and I can honestly say that Mount Carmel has always pushed me to improve and expand my own capacities as an educator. Just this past December, I completed my master of education degree through Framingham State University and I can honestly say that Mount Carmel School was a key factor in why I pursued my master’s degree after all these years. To be a part of the school’s legacy as a president is humbling and I aim to continuously improve and expand on the school’s abilities to learn, grow, and adapt to the ever-changing landscape that is education.”

One of the new programs Mount Carmel School will implement during the first year of Taimanao’s official presidency is the incorporation of wellness learning opportunities into the school’s curriculum.

“After our community was exposed to the COVID-19 pandemic, it was no surprise to educators across the country that varying aspects of our students’ wellness would be affected. While we did our best to give our students as many opportunities to engage and collaborate safely, children still showed signs of depression and anxiety. This inspired us to embed wellness learning opportunities into the curriculum itself. Therefore, starting this school year, Mount Carmel School will dedicate Fridays as wellness days,” she said.

Each Friday of the week would be dedicated to educating its students on varying wellness techniques.

Additionally, Taimanao is focused on the development of the school’s IT infrastructure and facilities master plan to better support student learning and engagement. Taimanao expressed gratitude to the Federal Programs Office, as approved applications have helped MCS begin this effort.

Mount Carmel School’s first day of classes begins on Wednesday, Aug. 10, 2022, and the school will continue to accept applications for available grade levels.

the CEC will now be moving on to the process of going through each candidate’s petition and getting them certified, which she expects will be completed around next week.

“I have our staff going through all the petitions right now and they’re pretty much halfway through. Then the CEC board will certify the candidates and they will issue certifications, hopefully within next week,” she said.

In addition, Igitol said, the CEC has already started its election preparations, including ordering the ballots that will be used this November.

“Right now, we’re corresponding with our vendors that we’re going to order the ballots from,” she said.

Also, the CEC executive director said CEC is in the process of sending out letters to prospective poll sites, requesting to use these facilities during the general election in November.

“We’re [also] preparing logisticwise. Aside from ordering everything that we need to order, we’re also preparing by sending out request letters for the usage of polling places, and other small things like we are getting our supply boxes ready for our poll workers, updating our rosters, and just maximizing registration,” she said.

As the general election draws near, Igitol would also like to encourage everyone to register to vote. For those who can’t register during weekdays, Igitol said the CEC has decided to open on Saturday too to accommodate these individuals.

“We’re open every Saturday starting at 9am until Sept. 9. Sept. 9 is the last day to register to vote. So every Saturday, we have our office here open from 9am to 2pm and we’d like our voters to come in and take advantage of that, especially for the ones that are working and aren’t able to come during weekdays. We’re open on Saturdays. The only thing they would need to bring is a birth certificate or a valid U.S. passport,” she said.

to represent you in the 21st and 22nd CNMI House of Representatives.

“It is with a heavy heart that I officially announce my decision not to run in this 2022 election. It was a really hard decision to make because I truly love representing and advocating for our community.

“In the past three and a half years, I have expanded and grown professionally and personally. From adopting the Tanapag Youth Center to representing the CNMI on international stages, it has been an honor and a privilege to serve our people and represent our home. It has strengthened my love for our precinct, our island, and our Marianas.

“Being a legislator is just one way to serve our great Marianas and I am ready to explore other ways to serve our people. I am dedicated to public service and I intend to continue leading the movement toward environmental justice, promoting our Indigenous rights and culture, and ensuring our people live long, healthy, and purposeful lives.

“More than anything, it is our duty as a people to work toward moving our Marianas, and our world forward. We have the power and inspiration to write the next chapters of our story—whether that be better management and protections for our environment, supporting small and locally owned businesses, or guiding our youth. We each have a role to play in making our home the paradise we know it is.

“I love our home and I’m not leaving. I am not going anywhere. I plan to continue to live, work, and serve here—and hopefully raise a family here too.

“Thank you to my loved ones, friends, and supporters who helped me become the leader I am. My amazing team, Jenise, Zeno Jr., Edilynn, Kenzi, Ofing, and interns Trini, Emma, Ryan and Maryjo—I am grateful for your hard work and dedication.

My family, Diego and Dolores Babauta, and siblings, Carmine, Tracy, Justin and Kristine—your endless love and support mean the world to me. My campaign manager and Nina, Susan Babauta and her husband, John, as well as their children, Jessica and Nancy—I’ve been blessed to have you all by my side.

“I have aspirations to run for higher office and I keep those dreams close because 2024 is just around the corner. But for now, let’s stay informed, ask questions, and exercise our right to vote in November. This is an important election and I hope to see you at the polls!” (Saipan Tribune)

STOP

“Medicaid was never in jeopardy. Medicaid has always been taken care of not, just what we offered but we actually contribute more,” said Torres in an interview Monday.

The governor said his administration has always taken care of Medicaid recipients.

“So again, there’s no shortage of $5 million. We will continue to make our ends meet,” he added.

Torres suggested that any elected official who makes these claims should “please do the homework, because it’s an embarrassment and an insult” to the institution who work so hard protecting the CNMI’s people.

“We have elected officials going out and misinforming the community. It just shows how misinformed they are or they don’t know the reality versus the political season,” he said.

Last Aug. 2, saying the ripple effects of losing $28 million in federal Medicaid money will be devastating, Reps. Christina E. Sablan (D-Saipan) and Donald M. Manglona (Ind-Rota) urged Torres in a letter to exercise his 25% reprogramming authority to immediately transfer the required $5 million local matching funds to the Commonwealth Medicaid Agency.

Sablan and Manglona said Torres may also direct the Finance secretary to expeditiously provide the House of Representatives with an updated status of all accounts to assist them in identifying the funding sources for an amendment to Public Law 22-08, the Annual Appropriations Act for Fiscal Year 2022.

Sablan and Manglona chair the House Health and Welfare Committee and House Ways and Means Committee, respectively.

Torres said yesterday that during a recent Health and Welfare Committee meeting, CNMI Medicaid Agency acting director Vicente Borja was asked what would happen if the administration does not give it the $5 million.

“Well, obviously, if we don’t give, then we return [the] $28 million. But the right question was never asked: Are we short $5 million?” Torres said.

The governor said they know that no matter whatever funding grant the CNMI Medicaid has, if the administration does not come up with a local match, then the available federal money gets returned.

“So again, if there is a misunderstanding, I want to let the community know...that Medicaid is not short of money. And that, as always, the recipients will continue to get the services they need,” he said.

The governor said the $5 million is in the administration’s proposed budget submission for fiscal year 2023, using different sources and reprogramming authorities to make the payment.

A former Department of Public Works Public information officer has asked the Superior Court to deny DPW's motion to dismiss his petition for a judicial review of DPW's termination of his employment, and to impose a Rule 11 sanction against the department.

Felipe Q. Atalig, a former DPW PIO who is representing himself in this lawsuit, wants sanctions imposed on the department for alleged violations made during the process of seeking a dismissal of the plaintiffs' petition for a judicial review of his termination.

Atalig explained that, according to Rule 11, when an attorney, or an unrepresented party, submits a complaint, defense, memorandum of law, or other written submission to the court, he is certifying that the document is not being submitted for an improper purpose such as to harass someone; the legal arguments have a basis under existing law or there is a good-faith basis to change the law or create new law; the facts are supported by evidence or will be supported by evidence; and denials of any facts are supported by evidence or will be supported by evidence.

Rule 11 also provides that if the rule is violated, a court may impose a punishment on any attorney, law firm, or party responsible for the violation, Atalig said.

However, Atalig said, DPW failed to include the claim processing issue in its initial motion to dismiss.

"DPW knew or should have known about the claim-processing issue and completely failed to assert such a claim in its first motion to dismiss. Knowing full well that DPW negligently failed to include the claim processing issue in its initial motion to dismiss, DPW knew that the only way to get a second bite at the apple was to assert that its second successive motion to dismiss was now being made pursuant to NMI R. P. Admin. App. 2(g) (2).... [But] the Northern Mariana Islands Rules of Procedure for Administrative Appeals do not provide such explicit authority to file a successive motion to dismiss," Atalig said.

Because of this, Atalig argues that the filing of the successive motion to dismiss is being made for an improper purpose such as to harass the petitioner; the legal arguments for a motion to dismiss have no basis under existing law; DPW has waived its right to file successive motion to dismiss based on claim processing issue; and the Rules prohibit the filing of successive motion to dismiss in this case, therefore the court should impose a Rule 11 sanction against DPW as the moving party.

"The punishment could include, among other things, fines paid to the court, compensating the other party, and paying another party's attorneys' fees," he said.

DPW Secretary James Ada terminated Atalig, 83, back in March 2018 for alleged sexual harassment.

Atalig is a former member of the Marianas District Legislature and the Congress of Micronesia and was a delegate to the NMI's first constitutional convention in 1976.

However, Atalig said he merely put his hand in an engineer's pocket to demonstrate a point during an argument, but the engineer alleged that Atalig touched him inappropriately.

In his petition for judicial review, Atalig claims that the real reason for his termination was an ongoing power struggle between him and one of DPW's directors.

$100K bail set for man in drug trafficking case

By KIMBERLY B. ESMORES

REPORTER

The Superior Court has imposed a $100,000 cash bail on a man accused of trafficking methamphetamine.

Zhang Kui, 33, appeared before Superior Court Associate Judge Joseph N. Camacho last Friday for a bail hearing. He is being charged with trafficking and possession of a controlled substance.

Zhang, also known as "Driver", was arrested by the Department of Public Safety-Criminal Investigation Division and Drug Enforcement Task Force following a "buy-walk" operation last June.

Camacho imposed a $100,000 cash bail on the defendant and remanded Zhang to the custody of the Department of Corrections after the hearing.

Zhang was ordered to return to court for a preliminary hearing on Aug. 12 at 10am and for an arraignment on Aug. 15 at 9am.

At the hearing, Zhang was represented by the court-appointed assistant public defender, Tyler Scott, while assistant attorney general Frances T. Demapan appeared for the government. Xuiming Callaghan served as Zhang's interpreter.

According to a press release from the Department of Public Safety, Zhang sold 1.3 grams of methamphetamine, or "ice" to a DETF informer. No other information about the case of the defendant was available as of press time.

Amata welcomes Cantor's new role at DOI

American Samoa Delegate Uifa'atali Amata welcomes the confirmation of Carmen Cantor as the assistant secretary of the Interior for Insular and International Affairs:

"I'm pleased to welcome Assistant Secretary Cantor to this role that's so important for our islands. She brings the experience both of her Puerto Rican heritage and time in the Indo-Pacific to the job. It is key to have a strong team on board at the Department of the Interior focused specifically on the territories and the freely associated states," said Amata. "I just want to extend my best wishes to Assistant Secretary Cantor as she takes on these responsibilities, and I know the territories and DOI will work together effectively for the needs of our people. While she will be busy in Washington, there's always the possibility she will have a future chance for a visit to see beautiful American Samoa in person, as our people and ASG would make her very welcome, and we look forward to working with her."

On Thursday, Cantor was sworn in by Interior Secretary Deb Haaland. Previously, while she was a nominee for the role, Amata had the opportunity to speak on the phone with Cantor.

Cantor's extensive experience includes recent service as U.S. Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary to the Federated States of Micronesia. Previously, she led several State Department bureaus and offices as director. Notably, she has lived on islands, including Micronesia and she grew up in Puerto Rico. She earned her B.A. at the University of Puerto Rico, and her M.A. at the Inter-American University of Puerto Rico. (PR)

Alex Jones soils free speech

Alex Jones disgraces all that's good about the First Amendment.

A Texas jury has ordered the conspiracy theorist to pay $49.3 million in total damages to the parents of a first grader killed in the 2012 Sandy Hook Elementary School massacre. About time!

Jones finally admitted, when he was faced with bankruptcy, that the 2012 attack in Newtown, Connecticut, was "100% real."

Freedom of speech is not free—no matter what Jones and other purveyors of news porn may profess. There's a major ethical difference between reporting on Big Foot sightings or UFOs vs. trying to debunk the murders of schoolchildren.

The Dec. 14, 2012, Sandy Hook insanity claimed 26 lives—including 20 children between 6 and 7 years old.

The Herald was there within hours. Our reporters called back, one who was sick to her stomach, with constant updates. It remains a cruelty that's unimaginable. At least it is to us.

Alex Jones and his ilk make money—reportedly $800,000 a day at one point for Jones—by preying on people who don't have a firm grip on reality. It's almost a disservice to even give these bottom-feeders any ink. But some truths need to be put on the presses.

No one should be allowed to tarnish the memory of loved ones lost to such a tragedy. Many will argue this should apply to other topics, but there's nuance in the news. The mass murder of children does not fall into any category other than a crime against humanity.

We don't buy what Alex Jones is selling and nobody else should either. No amount of apology should free him from his shameful prison.

"I admitted I was wrong. I admitted it was a mistake. I admitted that I followed disinformation but not on purpose. I apologized to the families. And the jury understood that. What I did to those families was wrong. But I didn't do it on purpose," Jones said after the verdict.

Too little, too late.

Moving in with your parents could be good for America

Over the past few years, many students have told me about their frustrations about possibly needing to move back to their hometowns and into their parents' homes for financial reasons.

I have pointed out that living with one's family is fairly typical in many places around the world and that even a few generations ago, this was the norm in the U.S., including my own family, where my mother was one of three generations living under the same roof.

With rising student debt, levels of inflation not seen in decades and housing costs hitting younger Americans, it is no surprise that my students are facing this situation. A new Pew research report has found that a quarter of American adults ages 25 to 34 (millennials) resided in a multigenerational family household in 2021, a significant increase from just 9% in 1971.

Pew uncovered gains in multigenerational living—that is, living in a household that includes two or more adult generations—among all age groups in the past 50 years, with the increase being pronounced among millennials today. According to an analysis of census data from 1971 to 2021, the share of people living in multigenerational family households had more than doubled to 18% of the U.S. population. Moreover, by 2021, young adults were notably more likely than older Americans to have this type of living arrangement.

While many of my students are less than thrilled about moving home, there is a possible silver lining to these newly reconstituted multigenerational households: They may just help improve our democracy.

The fact is that generations have notably different socio-political identities. Having come of age in different eras, different generations often maintain divergent attitudes toward social policy, questions of identity and political outlook.

Numerous surveys have shown, for instance, that younger millennials generally feel less politically effective than older generations today. When asked if ordinary citizens can do much to influence the government in Washington if they were willing to make an effort, fewer than 4 in 10 of these younger Americans believe that they can do so. In contrast, 55% of those 65 and older believe that they can exert influence.

A Pew survey found that 7 in 10 members of Gen Z (born after 1996) said the government should do more to solve problems, compared with just 49% of baby boomers (born 1946 to 1964) and 39% of the silent generation (born 1925 to 1945).

There are also appreciable differences on questions of social policy such as LGBTQ rights and the environment along with partisan identification. Looking at the issues around gender identity, half of adults ages 18 to 29 believe that someone can be a man or a woman even if that differs from the sex they were assigned at birth, while about a third of those 50 and older feel the same way. And Pew has found that younger generational cohorts approved of Donald Trump (22% of registered Gen Z voters and 32% of millennials) at notably lower number than older groups (48% of baby boomers and 57% of those in the silent generation).

If families live together in shared spaces, conflicts will occur. Rather than being able to move into online echo chambers, family members may have to do the hard work of navigating dissimilarities. While some situations may worsen divides, it is still quite possible that family members will learn to listen, debate and disagree, and develop empathy for difference; minds may not be changed, but cultivating the skills to search for common ground could affect how these individuals move in the public and political sphere.

Moreover, sharing spaces with family members may also compel more political participation and improve our loneliness epidemic among younger Americans. Older Americans tend to be more likely to vote (my love of politics started when my grandma worked the polls decades ago and brought me with her). What if older family members help make younger members aware of how powerful their voices can be at the ballot box?

Younger Americans are also far more isolated and lonelier than their older counterparts. Having fewer cases of solo living arrangements and even simple expectations of shared family meals or other forms of family time might improve mental health conditions.

Adult children living with their parents in multigenerational households is certainly not a panacea and runs against an almost centurylong, post-Depression norm of moving out of family homes in young adulthood. But given new socioeconomic pressures, it's possible that multigenerational housing arrangements could result in more tolerance for divergent views. In a society full of echo chambers, political polarization and deep mistrust, that might be a very good thing.

America needs a Declaration of Independents

Whether one watches Fox News or MSNBC, reads The New York Times or the Wall Street Journal, it has become difficult to view the United States as anything but a game of political dodgeball, with two opposing teams that loath one another trying to knock the other out by whistling partisan fastballs at any vulnerable opponent. Gone are the days of what Richard Nixon liked to call “the great silent majority”—a phrase he appropriated from Homer, who used it to describe the dead. There is not much silence in politics these days. Nor is there much reasonable discourse. Screeching has largely taken its place.

By all accounts, somewhere between 80% and 90% of the American electorate is frozen in ideology and party affiliation, with Democrats having a slight advantage, although that edge is often not reflected in voter turnout. That leaves roughly one tenth to one fifth of American voters who may be persuadable by either of the two parties. Not unlikely is that most of those in the middle find something both to like and to dislike about Democratic and Republican policies and those who represent them.

Regardless of how small this group of persuadables may be, they are the key to America’s future. They are the tie-breaking votes. It is these independents to whom the task of choosing between two political parties, whose imperfections are both glaring and ubiquitous, is entrusted. They will decide on which of two radically different paths the United States will follow, leaving the losing side furious and likely uncooperative in bending to the national will. But not only will they select who rules the nation in the short term and what policies are put in place—on them may well rest the very future of democracy in the United States.

With the stakes this high, one can only hope that all of those entrusted with this immense responsibility watched the Jan. 6 hearings. The question then becomes whether what they saw is sufficiently persuasive to make party affiliation, ideology, policy initiatives, and even visceral dislike of one or both parties secondary. In coming elections, these voters will determine whether the threat to the often slow and tortuous progress the United States has made over more than two centuries in becoming a genuine democracy, a nation that actually ascribes to the notion that all of us are created equal, overwhelms what in simpler times would be considered crucial questions.

There should be little doubt.

To say the picture painted by the committee’s seven Democrats and two Republicans has been damning is an understatement. In fact, the most effective testimony was given by men and women whose conservative credentials are indisputable, and loyalty to Donald Trump, at least until after the 2020 election, was unquestioned. Leaving aside whether Trump is either a liar or delusional—and there seems to be no third option—that he behaved in a manner that was half Mafia don, half petulant 4-year-old, has been reaffirmed by a series of witnesses, almost all Republicans, who range from sophisticated high-priced lawyers to state officials to a young woman who was the first in her family to attend college to a poor fool from Ohio who lost his job and his house for believing the word of a man who likely viewed him and those like him with contempt.

The hearings, orchestrated by former ABC news chief James Goldston (whose surname seems short a final “e”), was turned from standard C-SPAN flat cadenced droning to a “Game of Thrones”-caliber cliffhanger, replete with surprise witnesses, punchy video clips, and episodes kept brief enough to not tax Americans’ stunted attention spans. Even Fox News, which initially intended to ignore the hearings, likely to air specials on Hillary Clinton’s emails and Hunter Biden’s laptop, was forced to scrap that plan and air the hearings live—although they balked at pre-empting their prime time stars. Still, theater aside, the case being made was so powerful, so well documented, so without potential contradiction, that to conclude anything but that Trump at the very least violated his oath of office seems impossible.

Republican complaints that the questioning was one-sided ring a bit hollow, since House Minority Leader Kevin McCarthy, who may well become speaker next year, decided to boycott the proceedings when his suggested appointments to the committee, which included members who may have actually been involved in the events, were rejected. Grousing now brings to mind the Yiddish joke, defining “chutzpah”—nerve—as a man who murders his parents and then throws himself of the mercy of the court on the grounds that he is an orphan.

Whether Trump is eventually indicted is not really pivotal—he is very adept at skating past overt violations of law and making his actual guilt difficult to prove in court, leaving underlings and supporters, like the Ohio man, to pay the price for his malfeasance. Nor should the fact that all of these “see the light” Republicans, some of whom, like Pat Cipollone, only came forward to save their own reputations, were all too content to go along with Trump’s questionable adherence to both the law and decency when it seemed that he might remain in power.

And so, in local and national elections in the coming months, to say nothing of the presidential election in 2024, that small slice of the electorate that actually considers both sides before casting their votes will be charged with determining whether a group of men and women who would undermine the foundation on which American democracy is built will be allowed to once again attempt to do so. We can only hope they make the right choice.

Fact-free speech is not free speech

The proliferation of lying in the body politic and certain news media has reached proportions so great that America finds itself on the brink of a revolution that threatens our entire system of government.

The weaponization of fact-free speech should be criminalized and offenders penalized by either removing the bully pulpit from which they perpetuate their lies or by streamlining legal channels by which the target of such attacks can extract monetary damages more easily.

How many Republican candidates are running for office under the debunked “stolen election” theory? How many still deny that the Jan. 6 assault on the capital was a deliberate effort to undermine the peaceful transition of power after legal efforts to do so failed miserably?

Anyone generating election funding using either strategy is defrauding their donors, plain and simple. And even worse, they are radicalizing a growing segment of the population to distrust fact-based efforts to restore confidence in our institutions and the guiding principle of respect for the rule of law and the checks and balances built into our Constitution.

Our political parties should be made to openly declare that no one can run for office under their name by knowingly manipulating public opinion through conspiracy theories, propaganda or disinformation.

Those who are elected and proven to be serial liars should have their voting privileges on the House or the Senate floor suspended until they take ownership of their distortions of facts. Repeat offenders should be banned from ever being allowed to serve their party again.

Reducing a political party’s numeric advantage in this way would presumably disincentivize its reliance on fabricated alternate realities as a substitute for a thoughtful, time-tested platform of ideas.

Any Congress member or senator found to have enriched themselves in ways that contradict moral principles, that they have made known through public statements or by their voting record, should be stripped of their position and forced to surrender the profits that they derived from their hypocritical actions.

Any journalistic entity that knowingly engages in fact-free speech by disseminating disinformation, representing unproven theories as being factual, or engaging in personal attacks without any substantiation should be sanctioned and eventually made to lose their credentials as a news organization.

Commentators or columnists for such organizations who routinely use their influence to spread theories or manipulate public opinion by deliberately weaponizing non-truths to demonize, polarize and divide should be made to quickly back up their hate rhetoric in court or pay restitution. Their employers should be made to pay ever-increasing fines and to suspend their employee’s on-air privileges for increasingly long periods of time.

As long as ratings and revenue drive the media, and principles of journalistic standards fall to a distant second (if they exist at all), using financial consequences to address abuses of free speech will be the most effective solution.

I await Dominion Voting Systems’ massive lawsuit against Fox News with great anticipation, as this will be the bellwether from which the future of unfettered fact-free speech in the news media will be measured.

Altruism and integrity in public service inspires American voters. Conversely, the ambition for power, fueled by purposeful lying, will be the death of the United States as a moral force in the world.

If we demand that our elected officials tell us the truth, perhaps we can repair the damage that has been done to the very flawed but workable two-party system that has struggled to serve our nation for so long.

We remain skeptical yet informative. If you want us to chase that man didn’t land on the moon and other such nonsense, call someone else.

We can take the heat on just about anything, but the morning the news broke that children in an elementary school in Newtown, Connecticut, were being killed we sent our staff reporters, photographers and a columnist running.

This country needs to figure out how to protect our children. Alex Jones and his hurtful ramblings did the opposite. He can keep his ratings. The rest of us will keep reporting and we will never forget Sandy Hook.

“Last night, the echo of ambulances and police cars was replaced by the glare of TV floodlights that overshadowed Christmas lights on the homes up and down Church Hill Road, which leads up to Sandy Hook Elementary School, the site of yesterday’s unspeakable carnage,” retired Herald columnist Peter Gelzinis wrote that December day.

A Newtown rabbi a year later grasped what everyone was trying to comprehend as a report on the shooting was released and residents faced more difficult days.

“The most important thing really is not how we die, because we’re all going to die. It’s how we live.”

Peter tracked that quote down in hopes it could ease some of the pain. That’s what Alex Jones will never understand.

Tinian Municipal Council honors three for academic achievements

The 18th Tinian Municipal Council has unanimously adopted three resolutions that recognize and congratulate—on behalf of the people of Tinian—three residents of Tinian for acquiring their doctorate degrees. The three, who were recognized in resolutions that were adopted last July 26, 2022, are Dr. Regina C. Palacios, in Education Curriculum and Instruction; Dr. Conrad M. Kiyoshi, in Biomedical Science Philosophy; and Dr. Raena P. Cing-Cabrera, in Teacher Leadership Education.

Tinian Municipal Council chair Joseph E. Santos expressed his pride in seeing these kinds of success in individual endeavors despite the challenges they faced. Council members Thomasa P. and Juanita M. Mendiola were both exceptionally proud that two of the recipi-

Peter Palacios Sr. and Dr. Palacios' youngest son, Brandon P. Rosa, received the plaque on behalf of Dr. Regina C. Palacios. Peter Palacios Jr. received the plaque on behalf of Kiyoshi. It was learned that Dr. Regina C. Palacios was off-island and Kiyoshi was in the middle of finals for Tinian's Northern Marianas College students. Cing-Cabrera was joined by her mother, Percy P. Cing, mother-in-law Joan R. Cabrera, husband Juan Vicente R. Cabrera and other family members in receiving the resolution. (PR)

Dementia support group to focus on spiritual support in August sessions

This month, the community can participate in several virtual support-group sessions focused on spiritual support for persons with dementia and family caregivers.

Two representatives of the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Pastor Colin Garraway and Elena Taneva-Cholakova, FNP-BC, will offer virtual presentations on "Spiritual Support through the Seventh-day Adventist Church" on Aug. 10 and 12. ### FAA clears Boeing to resume deliveries of 787 Dreamliner

WASHINGTON (AP)—Federal regulators said Monday they are satisfied with changes Boeing has made in the production of its 787 Dreamliner passenger jet, clearing the way for the company to resume deliveries.

American Airlines said it expects to get its first new 787 in more than 15 months as early as Wednesday.

The Federal Aviation Administration announcement confirmed reports late last month and came days after the agency's acting chief met with safety inspectors who oversee Boeing.

The FAA said acting Administrator Billy Nolen wanted to hear about steps Boeing has taken to fix manufacturing problems and ensure independence for Boeing employees who work with regulators.

Production of the big, two-aisle 787 has been marred by several problems including gaps between panels of the carbon-composite skin, and use of unapproved titanium parts from a supplier in Italy. Those issues prevented Boeing from delivering any of the planes for most of the last two years, and about 120 have been parked while Boeing tried to fix the production process.

The FAA said it will inspect each plane before it is approved for delivery.

American Airlines was hit particularly hard by the halt in deliveries. Earlier this year, it delayed some planned international flights because Boeing wasn't able to deliver the planes on schedule.

American said Monday that its newest 787 will come from a Boeing factory in South Carolina and is expected to begin carrying passengers "in the coming weeks." American said that will make 47 active 787s in its fleet, with another 42 on order.

Shares of Boeing Co., which is based in Arlington, Virginia, gained less than 1% on Monday after being up nearly 4% earlier in the trading session.

Southwest attendant suffers broken back in hard landing

DALLAS (AP)—A Southwest Airlines flight attendant suffered a compression fracture to a vertebra in her upper back during a hard landing last month in California, according to federal safety investigators.

The National Transportation Safety Board said the impact of landing was so hard that the flight attendant thought the plane had crashed. She felt pain in her back and neck and could not move, and was taken to a hospital where she was diagnosed with the fracture.

The safety board completed its investigation without saying what caused the hard landing.

The NTSB said none of the other 141 people on board the plane were injured in the incident at John Wayne Airport in Santa Ana, California.

The pilots told investigators that they were aiming for the normal touchdown zone on the relatively short runway.

"However, it ended up being a firm landing," the NTSB said in its final report, dated Friday.

Dallas-based Southwest said in a statement Monday, "We reported the matter to the NTSB in accordance with regulatory requirements and conducted an internal review of the event."

A spokeswoman for the airline declined to provide further information when asked about the result of the internal investigation and whether the plane was inspected for evidence of damage that could occur during a hard landing. The plane has been making several flights a day, according to tracking services.

Trump says FBI raided his Mar-a-Lago estate

Police direct traffic outside an entrance to former President Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago estate, Monday, Aug. 8, 2022, in Palm Beach, Fla.

AP

WASHINGTON (AP)—The FBI searched Donald Trump's Mar-a-Lago estate as part of an investigation into whether he took classified records from the White House to his Florida residence, people familiar with the matter said Monday, a move that represents a dramatic and unprecedented escalation of law enforcement scrutiny of the former president.

Trump, disclosing the search in a lengthy statement, asserted that agents had opened up a safe at his home and described their work as an "unannounced raid" that he likened to "prosecutorial misconduct."

The search intensifies the months-long probe into how classified documents ended up in more than a dozen boxes located at Mar-a-Lago earlier this year. It occurs amid a separate grand jury investigation into efforts to overturn the results of the 2020 presidential election and adds to the potential legal peril for Trump as he lays the groundwork for another run.

Familiar battle lines, forged during a four-year presidency shadowed by FBI and congressional investigations, quickly took shape again Monday night. Trump and his allies sought to cast the search as a weaponization of the criminal justice system and a Democratic-driven effort to keep him from winning another term in 2024—even though the Biden White House said it had no prior knowledge of it, and the current FBI director, Christopher Wray, was appointed by Trump five years ago and served as a high-ranking official in a Republican-led Justice Department.

"These are dark times for our Nation, as my beautiful home, Mar-a-Lago in Palm Beach, Florida, is currently under siege, raided, and occupied by a large group of FBI agents," Trump wrote. "Nothing like this has ever happened to a President of the United States before."

"After working and cooperating with the relevant Government agencies, this unannounced raid on my home was not necessary or appropriate," Trump said in his statement.

Justice Department spokesperson Dena Iversen declined to comment on the search, including about whether Attorney General Merrick Garland had personally authorized it.

Trump did not elaborate on the basis for the search, but the Justice Department has been investigating the potential mishandling of classified information after the National Archives and Records Administration said it had retrieved from Mar-a-Lago 15 boxes of records containing classified information earlier this year. The National Archives said Trump should have turned over that material upon leaving office, and it asked the Justice Department to investigate.

There are multiple federal laws governing the handling of classified records and sensitive government documents, including statutes that make it a crime to remove such material and retain it at an unauthorized location. Though a search warrant does not suggest that criminal charges are near or even expected, federal officials looking to obtain one must first demonstrate to a judge that they have probable cause that a crime occurred.

Two people familiar with the matter, who spoke on condition of anonymity to discuss an ongoing investigation, said the search happened earlier Monday and was related to the records probe. Agents were also looking to see if Trump had additional presidential records or any classified documents at the estate.

Trump has previously maintained that presidential records were turned over "in an ordinary and routine process." His son Eric said on Fox News on Monday night that he had spent the day with his father and that the search happened because "the National Archives wanted to corroborate whether or not Donald Trump had any documents in his possession."

Asked how the documents ended up at Mar-a-Lago, Eric Trump said the boxes were among items that got moved out of the White House during "six hours" on Inauguration Day, as the Bidens prepared to move into the building.

"My father always kept press clippings," Eric Trump said. "He had boxes, when he moved out of the White House."

Trump emerged from Trump Tower in New York City shortly before 8 p.m. and waved to bystanders before being driven away in an SUV.

Taiwan holds drills, says that China seeking control of seas

PINGTUNG, Taiwan (AP)—Taiwan's foreign minister said Tuesday that China aims to control the East and South China Seas via the Taiwan Strait, describing a greater ambition to upend the Asia-Pacific status quo and prevent nations from aiding the self-governing island.

Foreign Minister Joseph Wu spoke at a news conference in Taipei as Taiwan began live-fire military drills to test combat readiness in response to ongoing Chinese exercises that have included launching missiles into waters off the island of 23 million people.

China says its drills were prompted by the visit to the island last week by U.S. House Speaker Nancy Pelosi, but Wu said China was using her visit as a pretext. China also banned some Taiwanese food imports after the visit and cut off dialogue with the U.S. on several issues including climate change.

He said China aims to upend the status quo and annex Taiwan, the self-governing island republic it claims as its own territory.

The drills are a rehearsal for an invasion of the island in which it seeks to prevent other countries coming to the island's assistance, Wu said.

The exercises also show China's "geostrategic ambition beyond Taiwan," Wu said.

"China has no right to interfere in or alter" the Taiwanese people's democratic process or interaction with other nations, he said.

Taiwan and the mainland are separate jurisdictions with "neither subordinate to the other," Wu said.

Ex-Philippine leader Ramos is buried

MANILA, Philippines (AP)—Former Philippine President Fidel Ramos was laid to rest in a state funeral Tuesday, hailed as an ex-general, who backed then helped oust a dictatorship and became a defender of democracy and can-do reformist in his poverty-racked Asian country.

Ramos died July 31 at age 94 from COVID-19 complications at the Makati Medical Center in the capital region, his family said. He also suffered from a heart condition and dementia and had been in and out of hospital in recent years, former aides said.

An urn containing the ashes of the U.S.-trained general, who served in the Korean and Vietnam wars, was placed in a flag-draped coffin, which was carried by six pallbearers amid somber music.

His cremated remains were placed in his grave after a funeral procession led by honor guards and his family, which was showered with flower petals from two helicopters. The ceremony, which was broadcast live nationwide by state-run and major TV networks, was attended by newly elected President Ferdinand Marcos Jr., and was capped by a 21-gun salute.

Marcos Jr. visited Ramos' wake Thursday and consoled with the family of Ramos, who, he said, "was a symbol of stability after all the tumultuous events of 1986."

Rains in S. Korea flood Seoul's roads, leave 8 dead

SEOUL, South Korea (AP)—Some of the heaviest rain in decades swamped South Korea's capital region, turning Seoul's streets into car-clogged rivers and sending floods cascading into subway stations. At least eight people were killed—some by drowning in their homes—and seven others were missing, while more rain was forecast.

Deserted cars and buses were scattered across streets as the water receded on Tuesday as workers cleared uprooted trees, mud and debris with excavators and blocked off broken roads and pavement. Landslide warnings were issued in nearly 50 cities and towns, while 160 hiking paths in Seoul and mountainous Gangwon province were closed.

"The heavy rainfall is expected to continue for days ... we need to maintain our sense of alert and respond with all-out effort," President Yoon Suk Yeol said at the government's emergency headquarters. He directed officials' attention to areas vulnerable to landslides or flooding and to reducing the dangers of roads and facilities already damaged to prevent more deaths.

Most of Seoul's subway services were back to normal operations, but dozens of roads were closed due to safety concerns. The military was prepared to deploy troops to help with recovery efforts if requested by cities or regional governments, Defense Ministry spokesperson Moon Hong-sik said.

Oil facility fire jeopardizes Cuba's frail electric system

HAVANA (AP)—A deadly fire that began at a large oil storage facility in western Cuba spread on Monday, threatening to plunge the island into a deeper energy crisis as it forced officials to shut down a key thermoelectric plant.

Flames around dawn enveloped a third tank that firefighters had tried to cool as they struggle to fight the massive blaze in the western province of Matanzas that began just days after the government announced scheduled blackouts for the capital of Havana.

"I am very worried about the children, the elderly, the economy of Matanzas and the country," said Daylyn de la Caridad, a 28-year-old resident. "We don't know how this is going to end."

At least one person has died and 125 are injured, with another 14 reported missing ever since lighting struck one of the facility's eight tanks on Friday night. A second tank caught fire on Saturday, triggering several explosions at the facility, which plays a key part in Cuba's electric system.

"The risk we had announced happened, and the blaze of the second tank compromised the third one," said Matanzas Gov. Mario Sabines.

By late Monday, four tanks were compromised, Lt. Col. Chief Alexander Ávalos of Cuba's fire department told Televisión Cubana.

"The fire has taken on a greater magnitude," he said.

Firefighters had sprayed water on the remaining tanks over the weekend to cool them but failed to stop the fire from spreading. On Monday afternoon, the government's power company announced that the fire had forced the shut down a thermoelectric plant that provides power to the island's western region after it ran out of water, according to the official Cubadebate website. No further details were immediately available.

Russia, Ukraine trade accusations over nuke plant attacks

KYIV, Ukraine (AP)—Russia and Ukraine traded accusations Monday that each side is shelling Europe's biggest nuclear power plant in southern Ukraine. Russia claimed that Ukrainian shelling caused a power surge and fire and forced staff to lower output from two reactors, while Ukraine has blamed Russian troops for storing weapons there.

Nuclear experts have warned that more shelling of the Zaporizhzhia nuclear power station, which was captured by Russia early in the war, is fraught with danger.

The Kremlin echoed that Monday, claiming that Kyiv was attacking the plant and urging Western powers to force a stop to that.

"Shelling of the territory of the nuclear plant by the Ukrainian armed forces is highly dangerous," Kremlin spokesman Dmitry Peskov told reporters. "It's fraught with catastrophic consequences for vast territories, for the entire Europe."

Ukraine's military intelligence spokesman, Andriy Yusov, countered that Russian forces have planted explosives at the plant to head off an expected Ukrainian counteroffensive in the region. Previously, Ukrainian officials have said Russia is launching attacks from the plant and using Ukrainian workers there as human shields.

Yusov called on Russia to "make a goodwill gesture and hand over control of the plant to an international commission and the IAEA (International Atomic Energy Agency), if not to the Ukrainian military."

Ukraine's ombudsman, Dmytro Lubinets, likewise urged that the United Nations, the IAEA and the international community send a delegation to "completely demilitarize the territory" and provide security guarantees to plant employees and the city where the plant is based, Enerhodar.

The IAEA is the U.N.'s nuclear watchdog. Its director-general, Rafael Grossi, told The Associated Press last week that the situation surrounding the Zaporizhzhia plant "is completely out of control," and issued an urgent plea to Russia and Ukraine to allow experts to visit the complex to stabilize the situation and avoid a nuclear accident.

1 dead after US Coast Guard, boat collide in Puerto Rico

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico (AP)—A U.S. Coast Guard cutter and a Puerto Rico fishing boat collided Monday in an incident that killed one person and injured another, officials said. The accident occurred in the early afternoon near the north coastal town of Dorado, according to a U.S. Coast Guard statement. The agency identified the dead fisherman as Carlos Rosario and said his brother, Samuel Rosario, was injured. The two were aboard a 23-foot (seven-meter) commercial fishing vessel called Desakata, while the U.S. Coast Guard was traveling in a 154-foot (47-meter) fast-response cutter, officials said. Capt. José Díaz, commander of the Coast Guard Sector San Juan, said a thorough investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board is under way to determine what caused the collision and how to prevent similar incidents in the future.

UN envoy: Only peace can end Israel-Palestinian violence

UNITED NATIONS (AP)—The top U.N. Middle East envoy warned Monday that the ceasefire between Israel and Palestinian militants is "fragile" and the "cycles of violence" will only stop when an independent Palestinian state lives side-by-side with Israel. Tor Wennesland called on Israeli and Palestinian leaders and the international community at an emergency meeting of the U.N. Security Council on the latest violence "to strengthen diplomatic efforts to return to meaningful negotiations towards a viable two-state solution." An Egyptian-mediated truce took effect late Sunday, ending the worst round of violence since an 11-day war between Israel and Hamas last year. Israel withdrew from Gaza in 2005 and has fought four wars with Hamas since the group won a 2006 election in Gaza and seized power from Fatah in 2007. The clashes have exacted a staggering toll on the impoverished territory's 2.3 million Palestinian residents.

Hallways within in a home play a key function as it relates to connecting rooms and spaces. Even so, they are often overlooked when it comes to decor. Often upon entry into a home, a hallway is one of the early spaces that makes a first impression, so making sure it shines for your guests is an absolute must. Here are some top Design Recipes do's and don'ts.

HOW TO HIGHLIGHT HALLWAYS

DO'S

1. Do use mirrors to help make narrow hallways feel longer and wider.
2. Do use hallways as a chance to make a statement upon entry into a home.
3. Do use hallways as an opportunity to create a point of entry by adding a bench or console.
4. Do add elements of texture such as wallpaper along a hallway wall to add color and interest.
5. Do blend artwork and mirrors in a large hallway space.

DON'TS

1. Don't ignore the items that are reflected in mirrors and windows along hallways.
2. Don't introduce too many colors in a hallway. Remember, hallways connect rooms and spaces and should be neutral and cohesive.
3. Don't overwhelm hallways with too many photographs and artwork. Often less is more.
4. Don't forget that lighting can play a role in highlighting a hallway, for example using a strong chandelier or pendant.
5. Don't ignore the opportunity to use a hallway as a focal point or place to a highlight in the home.

Olivia Newton-John, who played Sandy in 'Grease,' dies at 73

NEW YORK (AP)—Olivia Newton-John, the Grammy-winning superstar who reigned on pop, country, adult contemporary and dance charts with such hits as "Physical" and "You're the One That I Want" and won countless hearts as everyone's favorite Sandy in the blockbuster film version of "Grease," has died. She was 73.

Newton-John, a longtime resident of Australia whose sales topped 100 million records, died Monday at her Southern California ranch, John Easterling, her husband, wrote on Instagram and Facebook.

"Olivia has been a symbol of triumphs and hope for over 30 years sharing her journey with breast cancer," he wrote. "We ask that everyone please respect the family's privacy during this very difficult time."

From 1973-83, Newton-John was among the world's most popular entertainers. She had 14 top 10 singles just in the U.S., won four Grammys, starred with John Travolta in "Grease" and with Gene Kelly in "Xanadu." The fast-stepping Travolta-Newton-John duet, "You're the One That I Want," was one of the era's biggest songs and has sold more than 15 million copies.

"My dearest Olivia, you made all of our lives so much better," Travolta wrote in an online post. "Your impact was incredible. I love you so much. We will see you down the road and we will all be together again. Yours from the moment I saw you and forever! Your Danny, your John!"

"Physical," the bouncy, R-rated smash released in 1981, was No. 1 for 10 weeks and was named Billboard's song of the year despite being banned by some radio stations. An aerobics-friendly promotional clip, filmed in the early years of MTV, won a Grammy for best video.

Ezra Miller charged with felony burglary in Vermont

By JAKE COYLE
AP FILM WRITER

Actor Ezra Miller has been charged with felony burglary in Stamford, Vermont, the latest in a string of incidents involving the embattled star of "The Flash."

In a report Monday, Vermont State Police said they responded to a burglary complaint in Stamford on May 1 and found several bottles of alcohol were taken from a residence while the homeowners weren't present. Miller was charged after police consulted surveillance footage and interviewed witnesses.

The police report said Miller was located shortly before midnight Sunday and was issued a citation to appear for arraignment in Vermont Superior Court on Sept. 26.

The felony charge adds to Miller's mounting legal woes and reports of erratic behavior. The 29-year-old actor was arrested twice earlier this year in Hawaii, including for disorderly conduct and harassment at a karaoke bar. The second incident was for second-degree assault.

The parents of 18-year-old Tokata Iron Eyes, a Native American activist, also earlier this year filed a protec-

Both musically and image-wise, she reinvented herself during those years. The blonde, ever-smiling Newton-John initially favored mild pop-country songs such as "Please Mr. Please" and "Have You Never Been Mellow" and soft-breathing ballads like "I Honestly Love You," which in 1975 won Grammys for best female pop vocal and record of the year. But she picked up the tempo in "Grease," especially after Sandy ditched her white sweaters and blouses for waist-high, black leather pants. "Physical" even made Newton-John blush as she told her would-be lover "There's nothing left to talk about/Unless it's horizontally" and finally called out "Let's get animal! Animal!"

"I recorded it and then suddenly thought, 'Goodness, maybe I've gone too far!'" she told Entertainment Weekly in 2017, recalling how the song had been suggested by manager Roger Davies. "I called Roger and said, 'We've got to pull this song!'" He said, "It's too late. It's already gone to radio and it's running up the charts." I was horrified!"

Fans flooded social media to mourn her death. "Farewell with love to the legend who will forever be my first crush," wrote actor Daniel Dae Kim. Added Tracie Thoms: "Olivia Newton-John is an icon. We will miss her dearly." Gabrielle Union said she and her sister watched "Xanadu" "more times than I could count."

Australia's acting Prime Minister Richard Marles described her death as feeling like the end of an era for a generation who grew up watching "Grease" and said, "It feels like the world is a little emptier without Olivia Newton-John as a part of it."

tion order against Miller, accusing the actor of grooming their child and other inappropriate behavior with her as a minor from the age of 12. Tokata Iron Eyes recently told Insider that those allegations were false.

Attorneys for Miller didn't immediately respond to requests for comment on the Vermont felony charge or the protection order related to Tokata Iron Eyes.

After appearing in several films for Warner Bros. and D.C. Films as the Flash, Miller stars in the upcoming standalone film "The Flash," due out in June 2023. Though Warner Bros. last week axed the nearly completed "Batgirl" film, the studio has suggested it remains committed to releasing "The Flash."

In an earnings report last week, David Zaslav, chief executive of Warner Bros. Discovery referenced "The Flash." "We have seen 'The Flash,' 'Black Adam' and 'Shazam 2. We are very excited about them," said Zaslav. "We think they are terrific, and we think we can make them even better."

Representatives for Warner Bros. didn't respond to messages Monday.

Drunk uncle crosses the line with kiss

DEAR ABBY: I come from a large, close family. The majority of them live in another state. A couple of family members live in the same state I reside in. One night, my uncle came over and we were hanging out having drinks. We both drank too much and at some point, he started to kiss my neck. I told him to stop because he is family, and he did. Luckily, nothing more happened. The next day he texted and called profusely apologizing. I have been hurt, sad and angry ever since. He wanted to talk about it, but I didn't.

We still see each other at family get-togethers since there are only a few of us out here. I haven't told anyone, and it's hard to keep this to myself, but I'm afraid that if I say something, it could cause a rift in my family. How do I get through this without hurting them? Should I confront him and tell him how this made me feel? Should I confide in a family member? Or must I just pretend it didn't happen?

EMOTIONAL IN ARIZONA

DEAR EMOTIONAL: Do not pretend it didn't happen. Because you feel the need to get this off your chest, tell your amorous uncle how hurt, angry and violated you felt by what he did. I see no reason why you should announce this to the family for the reason you mentioned. However, do not see him alone or drink with him again.

DEAR ABBY: I have been babysitting my grandson, alternating with the other grandmother, for two years. She and I rarely see each other, but invariably, when we do, something I say gets repeated to the mother in a changed form. It causes my daughter-in-law to go ballistic on my son; never directly to me. Both of them have professional jobs and are in their 30s.

I have never felt valued or needed for myself or the service I provide for her, although my son frequently expresses appreciation privately to me. They hope to have their child enrolled in preschool in eight months, but I very much want to quit because yet another miscommunication occurred this week. My son makes excuses for his wife, but I think she should talk to me directly, so I can refute what her mother says.

I'm told her mother has a "listening issue" that my daughter-in-law is aware of, but apparently that doesn't matter when it comes to me. I'm pretty sure that whether I continue or leave now, I will rarely see them or the baby once he starts preschool, although we live only 20 minutes away. What should I do?

If you quit now, it will only give your daughter-in-law another excuse to blame you and curtail interactions with you in the future. If you choose to keep doing it, you will have an eight-month window for your grandchild to bond with you, which bodes well for the future.

Source: Durant reiterates desire to be traded by Brooklyn

By TIM REYNOLDS
AP BASKETBALL WRITER

Kevin Durant has again told Brooklyn Nets owner Joe Tsai that he wants to be traded, reiterating a request he first made nearly six weeks ago, a person with knowledge of the matter confirmed Monday night.

Durant also told Tsai that he has concerns about the Nets' direction under coach Steve Nash and general manager Sean Marks, said the person who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity because neither the perennial All-Star nor the team confirmed details of the talks publicly.

The Athletic first reported details of the latest Durant-Tsai meeting.

"Our front office and coaching staff have my support," Tsai tweeted Monday night. "We will make decisions in the best interest of the Brooklyn Nets."

This is the latest phase of a saga that began June 30, when Durant told the Nets he wanted a trade just as this summer's free agent period was beginning. Durant isn't a free agent; he has four years and Brooklyn Nets forward Kevin Durant (7) drives against Boston Celtics guard Jaylen Brown, right, during the first half of Game 4 of an NBA basketball first-round playoff series April 25, 2022, in New York.

$198 million remaining on his contract with the Nets, who will undoubtedly demand a haul of players and draft picks in any trade agreement for the 12-time All-Star, four-time scoring champion, three-time Olympic gold medalist and two-time NBA champion.

NBA Commissioner Adam Silver has never been a fan of trade demands going public.

"This needs to be a two-way street," Silver said last month. "Teams provide enormous security and guarantees to players and the expectation is, in return, they will meet their end of the bargain. I'm realistic that there's always conversations that are going to go on behind closed doors between players and their representatives and the teams. But we don't like to see players requesting trades, and we don't like to see it playing out the way it is."

Durant has spent three seasons with Brooklyn, not playing in the first of those years while he recovered from a torn Achilles. He averaged 29.9 points in 55 games last season, after leading the U.S. to Olympic gold at the Tokyo Games last summer.

What will it take to get Brittney Griner home?

WASHINGTON (AP)—Now that WNBA star Brittney Griner has been convicted of drug possession and sentenced to nine years in prison, attention turns to the prospect of a prisoner swap between the United States and Russia that could get her home.

Secretary of State Antony Blinken went public with that possibility last week, revealing in an unusual announcement that the U.S. had made a "substantial proposal" aimed at securing the release of Griner and another jailed American, Paul Whelan.

With her court case concluded and her sentence pronounced, such a deal — assuming one can be reached with the Russians — is Griner's best chance of being freed early.

Though the guilty verdict was seen as a foregone conclusion, the imposition of a sentence her lawyers decried as far longer than average could give the U.S. extra impetus to strike a deal palatable to Russia as soon as possible. And the formal end of the court case could be the opening both sides need to forge a diplomatic resolution, too.

A look at what's at stake:

WHAT DID THE US OFFER?

Blinken did not specify the WNBA star and two-time Olympic gold medalist Brittney Griner is escorted from a court room after a hearing, in Khimki just outside Moscow, Russia, Thursday, Aug. 4, 2022 terms other than to describe the offer as substantial and something that he intended to discuss with Russian Foreign Minister Sergey Lavrov.

A person familiar with the situation said that the U.S. offered to release Viktor Bout, a convicted Russian arms dealer serving a 25-year prison sentence on charges that he conspired to sell tens of millions of dollars in weapons to Colombia's former FARC guerrilla army. At the time of his conviction, the group was classified by the U.S. as a foreign terrorist organization, though that designation was lifted last year.

The officials did wind up speaking by phone last Friday, the highest-level known contact between the two sides since Russia invaded Ukraine. They are also in Cambodia for meetings involving foreign ministers of Southeast Asian countries.

WHAT HAS BEEN THE RUSSIAN RESPONSE?

Minimal, at least in public. Blinken did not provide details after his call with Lavrov about his response. The Russians gave no hint about their interest in the offer, other than a statement chiding the U.S. to pursue the Americans' freedom through "quiet diplomacy, without releases of speculative information."

On Monday, White House Press Secretary Karine Jean-Pierre said the Russian government had responded in a "bad faith" manner with an offer that U.S. officials did not regard as serious. She did not elaborate, though CNN reported last week that Moscow also wanted the release of a former colonel from one of its spy agencies who was convicted of murder in Germany last year.

WOULD THERE BE A PRECEDENT FOR A PRISONER SWAP?

In many ways, yes — and a recent one too. In April, Russia traded Marine veteran Trevor Reed, convicted of a physical altercation with police in Moscow, for Konstantin Yaroshenko, a Russian pilot imprisoned for a cocaine trafficking conspiracy.

Yet that involved a Russian with far less notoriety than Bout, a former Soviet air force officer who once inspired a Hollywood movie and who earned the nickname the "Merchant of Death" over allegations that he supplied weapons used for civil wars in countries around the globe. He has adamantly maintained his innocence.

But there's not much recent precedent for public discussions of prisoner swaps, at least by the U.S. government, before the deal is done and planes are in the air. That's what made Blinken's announcement from the State Department briefing room all the more striking.

On one hand, it seemed intended to communicate to the public that the administration will do whatever it needs to do to bring home wrongfully detained Americans.

But such a public overture also risks weakening the administration's negotiating hand to the extent it makes the U.S. look overly desperate for a deal, or signals to other countries that it is willing to meet potentially unreasonable demands.

SO WILL THE DEAL TAKE PLACE?

It's hard to say, but the contact between Blinken and Lavrov does suggest more progress than has been made before. It also reinforces the idea that the two countries are willing to maintain communication despite extraordinary tensions related to Moscow's invasion of Ukraine.

Griner is the most prominent American detained by a foreign country. She is a two-time Olympic gold medalist detained since February when police said they found vape cartridges containing cannabis oil in her luggage at an airport in Moscow. And though some Republicans including former President Donald Trump have expressed opposition to a deal, the conviction and sentence will only ramp up pressure on the administration to reach an agreement that can get her out soon.

"Today's sentencing of Brittney Griner was severe by Russian legal standards and goes to prove what we have known all along, that Brittney is being used as a political pawn," Lindsay Kagawa Colas, Griner's agent, tweeted Thursday.

She said getting a deal done for Griner and Whelan, a Michigan corporate security executive imprisoned on an espionage conviction he and his family says is baseless, may be difficult but it is "urgent" and the "right thing to do." The U.S. government also regards Whelan as wrongfully convicted.

For their part, Russian authorities have suggested that they regard a conviction as basically a prerequisite for a prisoner swap.

On Thursday, President Joe Biden again urged Russia to release Griner immediately.

"My administration will continue to work tirelessly and pursue every possible avenue to bring Brittney and Paul Whelan home safely as soon as possible," he said in a statement.

Bassitt goes 8, Marte homers as Mets increase NL East lead

N E W
Y O R K

(AP)—Chris Bassitt scattered eight hits over eight innings and Starling Marte hit a two-run homer in the first, leading the New York Mets to a 5-1 win over the Cincinnati Reds on Monday night.

With their 13th victory in 15 games, the Mets extended their NL East lead to seven games over idle Atlanta. New York just took four of five from the defending World Series champions at Citi Field last weekend.

Bassitt (9-7) allowed an unearned run and walked one while striking out eight in his second eight-inning outing this season and fifth in 114 career starts. He threw 114 pitches before getting pulled by manager Buck Showalter, most by a Mets starter this year and two shy of his career high set in August 2019.

"I want to go 115 or 120 pitches every start," Bassitt said before grinning. "But Buck don't let me."

Bassitt has thrown at least 100 pitches in a start 25 times since the beginning of 2019.

"I've done that for years. BoMel (ex-Athletics manager Bob Melvin) did that with me in Oakland and I think genuinely that's why they brought me over here, for just that reason," Bassitt said. "I'm not afraid to go over 100 pitches and it really doesn't affect me."

Bassitt's five-pitch assortment included a mid-90s (mph) fastball and a low-70s curveball. He faced the minimum through three innings before wriggling out of trouble the rest of the night. The Reds scored in the fourth, when he induced three fielder's choice groundouts — all from second baseman Jeff McNeil to shortstop Francisco Lindor.

The right-hander began a 1-6-3 double play to end the fifth and left the bases loaded in the sixth, when he got Aristides Aquino to line out.

"Give him a lot of credit. It's like you get something going and because of all that, he knows how to get out of it," Reds manager David Bell said.

Cincinnati stranded two more in the seventh before Jake Fraley was left at first in the eighth, when Bassitt struck out Aquino on three pitches following a visit from pitching coach Jeremy Hefner.

"Just moxie — he's such a competitive guy," Showalter said. "Just a guy that likes to compete and do what is expected of him."

Yankees 9, Mariners 4

In Seattle, Aaron Judge hit his 44th homer, Josh Donaldson

went deep and drove in three runs, and New York snapped a five-game losing streak by beating Seattle.

Donaldson doubled twice and Andrew Benintendi also had two doubles and three RBIs as the Yankees hammered Mariners pitching. But it wasn't a perfect night — Matt Carpenter broke his left foot when he fouled off a pitch in the first inning.

Donaldson and Benintendi got it started as New York knocked around Logan Gilbert (10-5) for seven earned runs and 10 hits — six for extra bases — in four-plus innings.

That was plenty for Jameson Taillon (11-2), who scattered three hits over seven innings. He gave up solo home runs to Mitch Haniger and Cal Raleigh, but otherwise avoided major damage.

Giants 1, Padres 0

In San Diego, Alex Wood held San Diego to three singles in 6 1/3 innings and San Francisco benefited from an overturned call at the plate to beat the sputtering Padres.

Giants reliever Camino Doval retired the heart of San Diego's order in the ninth — Juan Soto, Manny Machado and Josh Bell — to earn his 15th save.

It was the fifth straight loss and second consecutive shutout for the Padres, who fell to 1-5 since obtaining Soto and Bell in a blockbuster trade last Tuesday. Their streak of scoreless innings reached 23 dating to Saturday.

San Diego's lead over Milwaukee for the NL's third wild card is down to one game.

Wood (8-9) struck out five and walked none.

Blake Snell (4-6) allowed one run in 5 2/3 innings, striking out eight.

Orioles 7, Blue Jays 4

In Baltimore, Ramón Urias hit a three-run homer in the first inning, and Anthony Santander, Ryan Mountcastle and Austin Hays also went deep to lift Baltimore over Toronto.

The Orioles, who entered the day two games behind

Seattle and Tampa Bay for the final two wild cards in the American League, pulled within three of Toronto for the first wild card. This was the first of 15 meetings down the stretch between the Blue Jays and Orioles.

Baltimore starter Jordan Lyles (9-8) yielded two runs and eight hits in 5 2/3 innings. Félix Bautista got four outs for his fifth save.

Rose dismisses sexual misconduct questions at Phillies fete

PHILADELPHIA (AP)—Pete Rose dismissed questions Sunday about his first appearance on the field in Philadelphia since the franchise scrapped 2017 plans to honor him because of a woman's claim she had a sexual relationship with baseball's hit king when she was a minor.

"It was 55 years ago, babe," Rose told a female baseball writer for The Philadelphia Inquirer.

Rose, though, had no trouble reminiscing about the 1980 World Series champion Phillies team — it was 42 years ago, Pete — that was honored before Sunday's game.

After initially getting booed lightly, the 81-year-old Rose received a standing ovation from Phillies fans — many not even born or too young to remember baseball's hit king in his prime — when he walked onto the Citizens Bank Park field for the first time since he received a lifetime ban from Major League Baseball in August 1989.

"They made me feel real good today," Rose said of the cheers. "I don't want to say I expected it. I guess I did expect it from Philly fans. That's the way they are. They love their sports heroes."

Rose's already stained reputation suffered another blow in 2017 when the Phillies called off a planned induction into the team's Wall of Fame because of the sexual misconduct accusations levied against him. Rose brusquely responded to the reporter's question before the game — and later apologized to her following Sunday's ceremony after initially saying, "will you forgive me if I sign 1,000 baseballs for you?" — and was just as combative on the topic after the pregame celebration.

"I'm going to tell you one more time: I'm here for the Philly fans, I'm here for my teammates, OK," Rose said. "I'm here for the Philly organization and who cares what happened 50 years ago."

The woman, identified as Jane Doe in 2017, said Rose called her in 1973, when she was 14 or 15, and they began a sexual relationship in Cincinnati that lasted several years. She also alleged Rose met her in locations outside Ohio for sex.

Rose's lawyer had said the woman's claims were unverified.

Rose acknowledged in 2017 that he did have a relationship with the woman, but he said it started when she was 16. He Cavan Biggio and Matt Chapman homered for the Blue Jays. Vladimir Guerrero Jr. extended his hitting streak to 19 games, longest in the AL this year.

Yusei Kikuchi (4-6) allowed five runs and six hits in five-plus innings.

Baltimore has won six of seven.

Cubs 6, Nationals 3

In Chicago, Keegan Thompson pitched six effective innings, and rookies Nelson Velázquez and Christopher Morel homered in the third as Chicago beat skidding Washington.

Thompson (9-5) gave up five hits and didn't walk a batter. Luke Voit homered in the sixth to end the shutout bid.

Pinch-hitter Joey Meneses launched a two-run homer for the Nationals in the eighth. Rowan Wick pitched a scoreless ninth for his fifth save.

Velázquez's homer highlighted the first three-hit game of his career.

The Nationals (36-75) dropped their sixth straight and have been outscored 51-20 during that span. Anibal Sanchez (0-5) pitched five-plus innings, the longest outing by a Nationals starter during their losing streak.

Angels 1, Athletics 0

In Oakland, Calif., José

Suarez struck out eight in seven superb innings to out-pitch fellow lefty Cole Irvin in Los Angeles' victory over Oakland.

Luis Rengifo homered in the first and it held up. Suarez (4-4) gave up two hits while earning his second straight win against the Athletics. He hasn't allowed an earned run in his last 18 innings.

Aaron Loup pitched the eighth and Ryan Tepera finished for his second save to close out the two-hit shutout in just 2 hours, 14 minutes.

Irvin (6-9) permitted five hits in eight innings and struck out six. He also lost to the Angels last week despite allowing only two runs in six innings.

Diamondbacks 3, Pirates 0

In Phoenix, Zac Gallen pitched seven dominant innings, Ketel Marte hit a two-run single in the eighth and Arizona blanked Pittsburgh.

Gallen (7-2) gave up three hits and two walks while striking out eight on 89 pitches. The seven innings matched a career high he's reached 13 times.

Joe Mantiply worked a perfect eighth and Ian Kennedy handled the ninth for his seventh save.

Pirates reliever Manny Bañuelos (0-1) took the loss.

also said they never had sex outside Ohio.

At the time, Rose was in his mid-30s and was married with two kids.

Rose was among many former great Phillies — including Hall of Famer Steve Carlton, and fellow World Series champions Bob Boone, Greg Luzinski and Larry Bowa — honored for the 1980 team. Mike Schmidt sent a videotaped message and missed the alumni day festivities because he tested positive for COVID-19.

"We've been doing it for a while, coming back every year, and to mix Pete in, I thought, was very special," Boone said. "When I go to (Cooperstown), I always thought he should be there. You can write anything there, but he was the greatest hitter in the league. Put his name up and put he did this, got punished for whatever."

Last month, the Phillies defended the decision to invite Rose to participate in the ceremony.

"In planning the 1980 reunion, we consulted with Pete's teammates about his inclusion," the Phillies said in a statement. "Everyone wants Pete to be part of the festivities since there would be no trophy in 1980 without him. In addition, the club received permission from the Commissioner's Office to invite Pete as a member of the championship team."

The original 1980 anniversary celebration was postponed for two seasons because of the pandemic.

A 17-time All-Star, Rose got 826 of his 4,256 hits during his five years playing for the Phillies from 1979-83. There are no immediate plans for Rose to get inducted in Philadelphia's Wall of Fame.

"Anybody would like to be on the Wall of Fame," Rose said. "I don't know who made that decision, but God bless them. They made it for a reason. I'm still here today for the biggest event in a long time here in Philadelphia. I'm sitting right here to talking to you guys. Everything evens out."

Rose agreed to the lifetime ban after an investigation for MLB by lawyer John Dowd found that Rose placed numerous bets on the Cincinnati Reds to win from 1985-87 while playing for and managing the team.

Rose has asked MLB to end his lifetime ban.

"He also did some things wrong and got in trouble for it," Boone said, "but there he is."

Kosebaki beat 670 Babes, 5-2, last Sunday at the Dandan Softball Field to tie Queens of the Diamond atop the women's division of the 2022 Budweiser Belau Amateur Softball Association League.

Pitcher Jennie Scalliem made noise with her bat when her sacrifice fly in the fifth brought home Angela Muna to break a 2-2 tie.

Kosebaki then piled on insurance runs in the sixth when Herminia Kelly and Sonia Isaac crossed home plate following an impressive double by Kayla Kaipat.

670 Babes actually were on the board first after Tiah

Camacho scored on a fielding error by Ving Ngiriblosch.

Kosebaki tied it when a single by Keyona Tudela scored Ngiriblosch in the third inning.

Scalliem and company would then take the lead in the next inning when Shayene Matsumoto singled in Kelly for a 2-1 Kosebaki advantage.

But Lizanne Guerrero would retaliate with a run of her own following consecutive singles by Semerina Simram, Julieann Guerrero, and Erlina Naputi to make it 2-2.

Scalliem then promptly silenced 670 Babes from the fifth inning onward.

Kelly went 2-3 at bat with two runs, while Ngiriblosch was equally impressive also going 2-3 with one run and a double to lead Kosebaki to the win. Kaipat and Matsumoto also each had RBIs.

Losing pitcher Simian went 2-3 on the plate and also had a run for 670 Babes. Guerrero also batted in a run, same with Caitlyn Blaney.

It was the third straight win against zero losses for Kosebaki, while the win dropped 670 Babes to 1-2.

The only other women's division game Sunday between Hotshots and Tokehao Ladies was rained out.

The three games that were played in the men's division last Sunday between Man Amigos and Momma Charo, Asahi and Peleliu, and Salty Boys and Aimeliik will be published in tomorrow's edition of Saipan Tribune.

Matsumoto also scored earlier in their semis win over Matansa, 1-0, to bring Kanoa to the finals. MP United, on the other hand, drew goals from Francisco Maratita, Namai-Scoggins, and Landon Springer to eliminate TanHoldings and set up a division title showdown against Kanoa.

TanHoldings went on to settle for third place after edging Matansa, 1-0, in the consolation match in the boys U13 division. Jerz Navarro made the lone goal for TanHoldings.

Earlier in the girls U13 division finals, TanHoldings was the first one to go through a penalty shootout to down Kanoa, 1-0.

Kaye Anne Costales knocked in the game-winner for TanHoldings in the shootout and was the same player that put the team on the board in the second half. Kanoa took the shaky lead at the start of the second half after getting a goal from Aubrey White in the fourth minute, but failed to hang on to the driver's seat, as Costales came into TanHoldings' rescue in the 17th minute. Costales then completed her heroics with a goal in the penalty shootout.

Before her strong finish in the finals, Costales registered a pair of goals in TanHoldings 3-1 victory over Southern United FC 1 in the semis. Alyza Marie De Belon logged the other goal for TanHoldings, while Kaila Mendiola scored the only goal for Southern United FC 1.

In the other semis game in the girls U13, Kanoa eked out a 3-2 win over Matansa.

White had a hat-trick for Kanoa with her third and last one posted in the closing minutes of the game handing Kanoa the semis victory. White had the upper hand in her duel against fellow striker Alyssa Borlongan, who knocked in the twin goals for Matansa.

Borlongan also nailed a pair in their 4-2 triumph over Southern United FC-1 in the battle for third place. Hailey Benavente recorded the two other goals for Matansa, while Southern got both of its goals from Selena Atalig.

many donors and supporters that made the trip of playing coach Bobby Cruz, Colin Ramsay, Isabel Heras, and Hye Jin Elliot to the South Pacific possible.

"I'd especially like to thank all those in the community who supported the team and helped make it possible for Isabel, Hye Jin, Colin, and Bobby to take part in this competition," he added.

Both the men's and women's teams entered the competition unseeded, but surprised many by advancing to the Final Four. Ultimately, Heras and Elliot lost in the finals to the powerhouse team from Fiji, while Cruz and Ramsay settled for fourth place after bowing to Vanuatu in the battle for third.

Cruz said what impressed him the most during the weeklong tournament was the development of teenage netter Elliot.

"We saw a lot of growth from Hye Jin in particular. She was excited and even though she lost in the finals, she was excited because she thought it's such a high level of tennis and was impressed how she found a new level in her game because no one on Saipan could really push her. She saw she can compete against the best and she's excited to see what kind of im-proud of their daughter's latest achievement.

"As parents, Arley and I are immensely proud of Isa for her dedication and commitment to the sport of women's natural bodybuilding. Both her twin sister Cielo and her wake up at 6am to work out and then again in the evening. Doing this all while on a strict diet while the rest of us in the house eat what we want," he said.

Mendiola-Long said Isa has always been go-getter so it doesn't surprise them anymore what she's become at a very young age.

"Isa has been a driven individual since she was little. Very competitive and always seeks to push herself. Her recent placement in the California OCB Bay Area Amateur Bodybuilding Championships has proven that even a 17-year-old island girl from Tinian can compete at the national level and place."

Long's father said the family expects bigger things coming from Isa as she transitions to college with her twin sister.

"We can't wait to see what levels Isa pushes herself to next. She has already stated she will be competing again in Massachusetts while attending Harvard. Not only will she be the youngest, but most likely the only competitor currently attending Harvard, unless of course her sister Cielo decides to join as well. As parents, you can probably imagine how proud we are of Isa," he said.

A week before Isa's triumph in San Leandro, Cielo finished third in the 2022 California WNBFF Muscle Mayhem Bodybuilding Competition in Sacramento.

She was the first of the Long twins to make her debut in the sport when she won the bikini competition of the 2021 Dee Clayton Classic at the Saipan World Resort in November last year.

provement she can make in the next year."

He added that the sky's the limit to the Saipan International School student if she continues to work hard.

"I think she's going to be an incredible player if she commits to training next year. She's asking to hit with the boys so you can already see she's super committed."

For Elliot, she and Heras have nothing to be ashamed of after falling short in the finals against the host's Ruby Coffin and Saoirse Breen.

"I'm so proud of how Isabel and I played throughout this tournament. Being unseeded we definitely pushed through and fought hard to place second."

She thanked a boatload of people for their success in the 2022 edition of the Pacific Nations Cup, which actually returned after a two-year absence due to COVID-19.

"I am dedicating this to all the sponsors we got that supported us to be able to attend this tournament. And to my parents who pushed me into this tournament knowing that I will do well. Additionally to my teammates/mentors who gave me advice and encouraged me throughout this tournament."

Heras, for her part, said despite the loss to Fiji, she and Elliot also came out of the tournament as better tennis players with the experience they gained from the Pacific Nations Cup.

"We're feeling really good. Fiji played amazing so it's a well deserved win for them. We battled hard in singles and we want to thank you for the support you gave us and for making this trip [to the Pacific Nations Cup] possible."

Ramsay said he and Cruz will only come back with better resolve after falling short on a podium finish in Fiji.

"It's a really tough loss for us. But we gained a lot in terms of experience and we're ready to train and we're ready to come back stronger. Just wanna say thank you to all who supported us. It's such an amazing event with teams from the Pacific and everybody here."

Kanoa Football Club and TanHoldings Football Club clinched the championships in their respective divisions in the NMIFA Youth Summer Cup 2022 last Saturday.

Kanoa FC pulled off a 2-1 victory in a penalty shootout against MP United Football Club during the boys U13 finals at the NMI Soccer Training Center in Koblerville.

Akoni Matsumoto and Aldric John Antonio delivered the goods for Kanoa. Matsumoto's conversion put Kanoa on top after the opposing teams had a scoreless draw in regulation, but not for long as Taiga Namai-Scoggins countered to knot the count. Antonio then made the go-ahead, while Kanoa goalie Zuriel John Abejo capped the close win with a save in the ensuing play.

Joining Abejo, Matsumoto, and Antonio on the champion team are J.P. Binghit, Damien Concepcion, Tahir Shakir, D'Artagnan Enerio, Rooney

Isa Ha'ani Long made an outstanding debut in the world of bodybuilding by finishing second and taking two third place trophies in the 2022 California OCB Bay Area Amateur Bikini Bodybuilding Championships held last July 23 at the San Leandro Arts Center in San Leandro, California.

The co-valedictorian of the Tinian High School Class of 2022 finished second in the novice class, third in the debut class, and third again in the open class.

Considering it's her first bodybuilding competition ever, Long was understandably thrilled by her achievement.

"After taking second in novice and third in open as well as third in debut, I was shocked and really happy.

Isa Ha'ani Long went home with three trophies in her bodybuilding debut in last month's 2022 California OCB Bay Area Amateur Bikini Bodybuilding Championships.

Since this was my first competition I wasn't expecting much, considering I was competing in the States and I was the youngest competitor. However, I was really happy with the results," she told Saipan Tribune.

Long said placing in her first bodybuilding competition wasn't a piece of cake. In fact, she said it took a lot of sacrifice and commitment on her part.

"I spent some months building muscle then went into preparation for 16 weeks leading up to my competition. I have been going to the gym for around three years now and I decided to take up bodybuilding to form a better relationship with my nutrition and challenge myself both mentally and physically," she said.

Her father, Tinian Chamber of Commerce president Philip Mendiola-Long, said he and his wife are mighty
